They offer great inducements.

LAST week witnessed the arrival of 3,726 emigrants to this country.

THE Ohio election will be held a week from next Tuesday—October 14th.

SAVAGE for Governor is what the reputation wing of the Democratic party says.

It is said that there are three hundred Chinese in New York who are married to white wives. The most of the women are Irish.

KEARNEY is going to Massachusetts again this fall. If Butler wants to be elected he had better get Dennis to work against him; if not, not.

ON DIT that Miss Ellie, third daughter of General Sherman, is to be married soon to a young gentleman named Thackeray, who is a relative of the great novelist.

WE welcome the Jonesborough Union Flag to our list of Republican exchanges. It proposes to fight in the Republican ranks hereafter. Its editor has heretofore been a Democrat and is an ex-Confederate. The Democratic party is no place for a live progressive man.

THE newspapers begin to hint that when Hendricks says he will "never, no never," play "second fiddle" again, that he means "hardly ever." Verily, this is "important information." People from a distance will observe that Knoxville has its fever—not the yellow fever but the Pinafore fever.

DEMOCRATS are getting scared at Gen. Grant from still another point. It's too awfully cruel in the General, anyway. Ever since 1862 they have been trembling in their shoes whenever he looked over their way. It is rumored that Ulysses, Jr., is about to marry a daughter of the Bonanza Flood. If there's so awfully much vitality in the "boom" now, that would become of it if some of Mr. Flood's were hitched on to the tail of it?

IF the Republican party in Tennessee are so much disposed to be honest and to pay the State debt upon terms satisfactory to the bondholders, why can't they unite with the honest Democrats and elect James D. Porter for Governor?—Dispatch.

When it is seen whether there are enough honest Democrats in the State to nominate Governor Porter, it will be time enough for Republicans to consider of that proposition. The Republicans do not expect to be wagged by the Democratic dog's tail. Thousands of Democrats, with whom the editor of the Dispatch co-operated in the election of Marks, would not touch Gov. Porter.

THE news from Ohio continues to be of the most cheering character. Foster will be elected by a large majority—fifteen to twenty-five thousand. It is more than that we will not be surprised. The Democrats gave up all hope of electing Ewing some time ago, but are making a desperate struggle to elect the Legislature. Since they came into power in that State they have gerrymandered the Assembly and Senatorial districts so that it is hard work for the Republicans to get a majority of the Legislature, but we have strong hopes that they will do it. Then Allen G. Thurman will step down and out, and Garfield or some other good Republican will take his place.

TWENTY-FIVE cents will pay for the WHIG and CHRONICLE to the first of January, 1880.

KILLED BY INDIANS.

Death of Major T. T. Thornburgh.

He is Killed in a Fight With Ute Indians,

One Hundred and Fifty Miles from Fort Steele.

Capt. J. Scott Payne Wounded in two Places, but Not Seriously.

Ten Men Killed and Twenty-five Wounded.

The melancholy intelligence reached the city yesterday afternoon that Major Thomas T. Thornburgh was killed last Monday by Ute Indians. The following brief dispatch announced the sad news.

FORT STEELE, WYOMING TERRITORY, October 1-4, 1879:

W. P. Chamberlain:

Maj. Thornburgh's command was attacked by Utes last Monday. Thornburgh, with ten men, killed. The fight was 150 miles from here.

The dispatch was signed by Maj. T. S. Webb and E. J. Sanford, of the firm of Sanford, Chamberlain & Albers, of this city, who have been at Fort Steele several days.

The only information of the expedition against the Utes, except the meagre telegraphic reports in our exchanges, is from a printed letter written by Hon. J. M. Thornburgh, who has spent most of the summer with his brother, Maj. Thornburgh, at Fort Steele, to his wife in this city. The letter is dated September 20th. It says: "The Ute Indians are about 200 miles South of here and are getting belligerent and are threatening trouble. This morning two companies of cavalry reached here by railroad. J. Scott Payne is in command of one of the companies. There is one company stationed here. These three companies and one of infantry will compose the command that goes on the expedition against the Utes."

Maj. Thornburgh, we presume, was in command of the expedition. Capt. J. Scott Payne, who is mentioned as being in command of one of the companies, was once a resident of this city, and was married here to Miss Lucy Alexander. He is safe, we presume, or something would have been said in the dispatch to the contrary. The letter from Hon. J. M. Thornburgh was written a week ago last Saturday, and the expedition doubtless set out a day or two later.

Since writing the above we have received the following special dispatch from Hon. J. M. Thornburgh:

FORT STEELE, W. Y., Oct. 1, '79.

Special Dispatch to the Chronicle.

Maj. Thornburgh's command of three companies of cavalry, fought the Ute Indians day before yesterday at Milk River. The following dispatch has just been received here: "Maj. T. T. Thornburgh was killed instantly while gallantly directing the movement of his troops. A more perfect gentleman and gallant soldier never lived."

CERRY, Adjutant.

Other information received states that J. Scott Payne is wounded in two places, but not seriously. Lieutenant Paddock was also wounded in the hip; Dr. Grims was wounded; Adjutant Cherry's horse shot and about ten men were killed and twenty-five wounded. About three-fourths of the horses of the command were also killed and wounded. The troops are in a good position and will hold their own it is believed until reinforcements reach them. General Morrill, and perhaps General Crook will go at once to the relief.

J. M. THORNBURGH.

We are also permitted, through the courtesy of Mr. J. C. Duncan, As a related Press Agent, to use the following:

NASHVILLE, TENN., Oct. 7, '79.

To J. C. Duncan, Agt. Asso Press:

Information received here shows that the fight between Maj. Thornburgh's command of 150 cavalry and from four to five hundred Ute Indians on Milk Creek, Colorado, was brought about as follows:

Several Ute Chiefs had met Maj. Thornburgh and expressed friendship, but large bodies of Indians were seen hovering about the command while on the march. Maj. Thornburgh was moving with caution, his command well in hand and prepared for the defense, the Indians getting thicker and bolder around the command. Rankin, a guide and scout, urged Maj. Thornburgh to fire on them, but Maj. Thornburgh replied, "I have no orders to kill them, only to arrest the leaders of the trouble as they are pointed out by the Indian agent. About this time a shot was fired in the rear of the wagon train, when the Indians attacked all around. The fighting was desperate. The train was promptly parted, and our troops went into good position, where it is believed they will hold out until reinforcements reach them. Maj. Thornburgh was killed, and Capt. J. Scott Payne is now in command.

E. J. SANFORD,
T. S. WEBB.

To the Associated Press.

MILK RIVER, COLO., Sept. 29.—Thornburgh's command was attacked in a canyon at noon to-day, one mile south from here, on our march to the Agency, and retreated in good order to the wagon train, where we are now entrenching ourselves.

4:30 p. m.—Major Thornburgh was killed instantly during the retreat. Capt. Payne was wounded in two places slightly. Lieutenant Paddock and Capt. Grimes were also painfully wounded. Ten enlisted men and the wagon-master, McKinstry, were killed and twenty-five men wounded. The command is now very well sheltered, but now and then are heard the guns of new hostiles who have just arrived. Our mules and horses are getting it all around. The red Devils fired the grass all around us to burn us out.

9 p. m.—We still hold our position. Every man is busy digging trenches and hauling out the dead animals for defense. To-morrow we expect to be attacked at daylight. Our courier, Joe Rankin, has volunteered to carry dispatches to Rawlins. Mr. Gordon's freight outfit of Indian supplies near us has been burned, also the company wagons of company "F," 5th Cavalry. About three-fourths of our horses and mules have been killed. Should reinforcements reach us in five days we can hold out very well with our ammunition.

CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 1.—The dispatches to General Sheridan corroborate the following: Maj. Thornburgh's command consisted of three companies of cavalry. The Indians, who were several hundred in number, were of the Ute tribe, and are said to be well armed and very brave. Over five hundred soldiers are ordered to rendezvous at Rawlins, and will reinforce the imperiled party as soon as possible.

Maj. Thornburgh was born at New Market, in this State, on the 26th day of December, 1842. He lived with his parents at that place until the beginning of the late war. In the spring of 1862, when a little more than nineteen years old, he left his home, crossed the Cumberland mountains into Kentucky to join the Union army. He enlisted as a private soldier in Company "A," 6th Tennessee Infantry, organized about that time by Colonel, afterwards General Joseph A. Cooper. He was appointed Sergeant Major of the Regiment and soon afterwards was detailed on the staff of Brigadier General Spears, commanding a brigade of Tennessee troops. While in the army the writer served with him in the same regiment, and can bear testimony to his gallantry, which was displayed on all occasions. He never quailed in the face of danger, and was always ready to go where duty called. He was as far from anything approaching cowardice as any man we ever met in or out of the army.

In the summer of 1863 he was offered an appointment to West Point, which, after some hesitation he accepted, and entered the Military Academy there soon after. He made an excellent record there, and, upon graduation, was appointed to a lieutenantcy in the artillery branch of the service—the Second U. S. Artillery, we believe. He was promoted to a First Lieutenantcy afterwards.

In 1871, he was detailed as Instructor of Military Tactics, and Commandant of Cadets in the East Tennessee University here, and served with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of the managers of the institution, for some two years. He was relieved from there and assigned to duty at Fort Fort, below Washington, in the State of Maryland, where he remained some time. Two or three years ago he was appointed a paymaster in the army, with the rank of Major, and served in that capacity until a year ago, when he was transferred to the 6th Infantry, retaining his rank of Major. His rapid promotion was something unusual in the army in time of peace, and it is the best evidence of the high estimation in which he was held by his superior officers.

He was an intimate friend of General Crook, and enjoyed the confidence of that excellent officer. He led an expedition against the Indians last winter, in which, though not altogether successful, we know his conduct met with the approbation of Gen. Crook, in command of that department.

On his 36th birthday, December 26th, 1878, Maj. Thornburgh was married to Lida W. Clark, daughter of Colonel Clark, a Paymaster in the regular army, who, together with two children, a boy and a girl, are left to mourn his cruel and untimely death. They will have the sincere sympathy of a host of warm personal friends, and a Nation will join them in mourning the death of the gallant young officer.

We have known Major Thornburgh intimately for nearly twenty years—since before he was grown. He was a brave man, generous and warm-hearted, honorable in the highest degree in his intercourse with his fellows. His kindness to his friends will never be forgotten. It is with sincere regret that we announce to our readers his untimely death. He has fallen a victim to the miserable, short-sighted policy of reducing the regular army to a mere bagatelle in numbers, and his blood is upon those who organized the policy.

YELLOW FEVER.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 1, 10 a. m.—No new cases of deaths are reported. Martin Daugher, Manddie Daugher, Thomas Cook and Ed. Cruik, were arrested this morning, charged with attempting to incite a riot last night at Camp Marks. Several shots were fired at the guards who attempted to arrest the principal leader, M. B. Whitehead, who escaped.

W. J. Speers and Judge J. M. Flippins, his attorney, left on the morning train for Brownsville, Tenn., to defend the legality of the election of J. S. Galloway as Special Judge in the case set for trial to-day before Chancellor Livingston.

The weather remains very warm. Memphis, October 1.—The following is the order of the court injunction suit served on parties made defendants in the late trial before special Judge Galloway:

Whereas, N. W. Speers, Jr., hath filed his bill of complaints in the Chancery Court of Shelby county against the defendants, J. D. Plunkett, et al., and obtained an order for a writ of injunction from Hon. J. S. Galloway, to be issued in pursuance of the prayer of said bill. These are therefore to command you, said Plunkett and others, that each and every one of you in your several capacities, do absolutely desist and refrain from interfering with lint cotton, whether loose or baled, or with seed cotton, and not hereafter to prevent in any way its being brought into any part of Memphis in wagons, cars or otherwise until further orders.

VIRGINIA.

PETERSBURG, Oct. 1.—The re-adjusters held an immense meeting at the Academy of Music last night, when the State debt was explained by Col. Wm. E. Cameron, of this place, and Hon. Frank Blair, of Wythe county. The auditorium was filled to overflowing with white people and the galleries were packed with negroes. Great enthusiasm prevailed.

ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Col. J. H. Haverly has purchased the Chicago Jockey and Trotting Club stock heretofore owned by Lawrence and Martin for forty thousand dollars. This gives him a controlling interest. He intends to run the track as a first class racing ground, offering such purses that all the best horses in the country will appear during the season.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The Financier, of to-day, says: "As exchange on New York has again sunk to a bulion point it is expected that £150,000 remaining on the market from an Australian consignment of £200,000, mentioned on Saturday, will go to America. In the meantime the French drain of gold to the United States seems to have assumed something of its former magnitude. A large sum is stated to have left Havre yesterday, and there is reason to believe, though it is not officially announced, that the directors of the banks of France have decided to advance the premium one per cent. for the purpose of checking the outflow. This determination has obtained credence in Paris, and it is anticipated by large withdrawals for London."

A WASHINGTON special to the Baltimore Sun says:

"Louisiana politicians say that there are lively times in that State just now. The Constitutional Convention was subjected to such a pressure from the 'outs' that it put in a provision in the Constitution vacating every office in the State but that of State Treasurer. As a consequence the office-seekers, which means almost the entire white male population, are in such a condition of ferment and excitement as almost parallels certain periods of the carpet-bag domination. All over the State everything is subordinated to politics, and there seems to be almost as much bitterness between the different factions of the Democratic party as there has been in the past between that party and the carpet-baggers."

May the Lord increase their misery. When such men fall out there is some chance for honest men to get their deers'—Let the fight go on.

Collection of County Revenue.

During the month ending September 30, 1879 the following collections of revenue were made by J. F. J. Lewis, County Clerk: State tax, $305.73; county tax, $337.81; railroad tax, $138.60; school tax, $56.80; corporation tax, $337.50. Total, $1,476.44.

The amounts were all promptly and properly disbursed and deposited yesterday.

Smutty Corn not Poisonous.

The belief is so widely prevalent among cattle feeders that the smut which sometimes grows on Indian corn is poisonous to cattle, that when a careful experimenter like Professor Kedzie of Kansas, comes forward and clearly proves that it is harmless, it almost takes one's breath away. One scarcely knows whether anything he believes is true. At any rate it is a caution against believing anything too easily, or without undisputed evidence in favor of its truth. The Professor fed cattle regularly on smutty ears, and they did not poison, but grew fat and frisky thereon, and we are bound to believe now that it is not at all injurious.

Dr. Kedzie is of opinion that where injury seems to result from cattle feeding on dry corn stalks, it is not from the smut, but because in some cows of weak powers it occasionally becomes indigestible.

Widow Oliver A Pauper.

Special to the Cincinnati Commercial.

WASHINGTON, September 28.—The Widow Oliver, who sued Simon Cameron for breach of promise, as Mrs. Bardell sued Pickwick, but was not so fortunate in her verdict as Mrs. Bardell, is now an inmate of the Poor-house of the District of Columbia. She tried to get a living by lecturing with the scandal for a text, but after several attempts concluded that the public didn't care to hear her story. She has been ejected from railroad trains for not having paid her fare, and from hotels for the same reason, and finally has announced herself a pauper and gone to the Poor-house.

Chisholme County Revenue Raid.

Mr. J. A. Goddard, Deputy Revenue Collector, Mr. G. T. Larkins and W. W. Freshour, made a raid into Claiborne county last week and arrested Mr. J. C. Brown, who they found engaged in the illicit whisky business. They seized one copper still, of 70 gallons capacity, formerly used as a brandy distillery. Brown was taken to Mayville for a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Mitchell, but the Commissioner being absent, he was taken to Rutledge, where an examination was had before U. S. Commissioner J. M. Goldman, and the party was bound over to appear before the Federal Court the second Monday in January, 1880, at Knoxville, Tenn. Brown is now one of the Magistrates of the 5th civil district of Claiborne county.—Morrison Times.

Bogus Certificates.

It is no vile drugged stuff, pretending to be made of wonderful foreign roots, barks, &c., and puffed up by long bogus certificates of pretended miraculous cures, but a simple, pure, effective medicine made of well known valuable remedies, that furnishes its own certificates by its cures. We refer to Hop Bitters, the purest and best of medicines. See "Truths" and "Proverbs," in another column.
